TO THE MEMORY OF
SOPHIA (CLARK) WALTON, 1813-1885,

Who wrote these lines in a little girl's album:

"Think of your grandma, Emma,
When she is far away.
Recall our walks together
And our amusing play,
When I was the prim hostess
And you the charming guest
Whose children were so very sick—
Baby and all the rest."

Preface

This little unambitious book does not pretend to be a real genealogy, but merely a record of the descendants of Daniel Clark, as found in our archives, in the replies to numerous letters of inquiry and in such family and county books as were available. It is hoped that some one better qualified for the work may take it up some day and, in adding to it, correct such errors as have crept in in spite of our care. For omissions we are sorry, but place the blame upon the large number who did not reply to letters, or failed to keep sufficiently in touch with the family to let their present addresses be known.

The name Clark was spelled with and without an "e" on the old records, but the signature of the settler is without, in every case we have found, so we have written it that way. As far as possible the letter has been given to those families accustomed to use it. This has been at times difficult, since brothers and sisters have not agreed on the subject, but we have followed the usage of each correspondent.

Where there have been differences in dates, etc., we have followed the testimony of the greater number, whether on public or private records.

Grateful acknowledgment is due Mrs. Harriette Clarke Sprague of Dowagiac, Michigan, for her valuable assistance, to Celestine Forstall for the original records of the family, and to various other members of the Clarke family who have so courteously replied to our requests for notes and anecdotes. To Edwin Clarke of Quincy, Ill., we owe the entire project, as it was made possible because he had for some years kept a close and accurate record of those of the Clark family of whom he knew, or from time to time heard. Mrs. Frank E. Clark of Hebron, Ct., has been a most valued aid not only in her children's line but in the lines of others and in historical research. Miss Alice Gay of Hartford has also been of great assistance.

We do not present the Clark coat-of-arms, because we lack authority for it, but the one handed down in one family is given: Sable, a mullet of six points, pierced, or, within a bordure argent, charged with three cross crosslets, fitchée of the field. Crest: A mullet of six points argent. Motto: Animo et scientia.

HONORABLE DANIEL CLARK OF WINDSOR,
CONNECTICUT

HONORABLE DANIEL CLARK OF WINDSOR, CONNECTICUT

In 1639, when he was seventeen years old, Daniel Clark of Weaxil (near Kenilworth), England, came to America with his uncle, Rev. Ephraim Huit, who became pastor of Old Windsor's Congregational Society, as a colleague of Rev. John Wareham. On June 13, 1644, Daniel Clark married Mary Newberry, daughter of Thomas and Jane Newberry, who came to America in the "Mary and John," 1630. Thomas Newberry had two brothers among Cromwell's Dragoons, and was descended from William Newberry, "Chronicler of his District." To William Newberry was accorded the honor, granted to but one man in a town, of adopting as his surname the name of the town where he resided. Thomas Newberry died in 1635 and his widow married the Rev. John Wareham, thus becoming for the second time ancestress of many of the Clarks.

Tradition states that Daniel Clark went home after he had been here some years, overcome by a longing to see his people and his old haunts. He knocked at his parents' door pretending to be a stranger from America, and as such was made welcome, their pleasure in his coming being doubled when they found him to be from Connecticut and acquainted with their son. It was Martha, his sister, who at length discovered the fraud and cried out that their Daniel had come home at last.

Daniel Clark held many offices in the colony. In 1654 he was tax assessor, appearing on the second tax list himself as having a "Family horse and two oxen." He was Representative from 1657 to 1661, Secretary of the Colony, 1658 to 1662, member of the Court of Assistants, 1662-4, Commissioner, 1662, and Captain of the Colonial Troops, 1664. He was made Attorney in the Andrus Court at Hartford March, 1687, was a member of the Particular Court, a Deputy, Clerk of the County Court, Member of the Committee to appoint and commission officers of the militia, one of the nineteen signers and grantees of the Charter of Connecticut, a member of the Committee to Advise the Indians, a member of the church, 1634, Recorder, 1658, and a member of numerous other committees on which he was appointed. He was one of the magistrates who sat in the trial for witchcraft of Nathaniel Greensmith and wife in 1662. A certain wainscotted pew was set aside for the use of magistrates in Windsor and on the appointment of Daniel Clark the Town Meeting made the following record: "May 5, 1651. At a meeting of the Towne Mr. Clark was appointed to Sitt in the greate pew."

In 1663 William Edwards, whose descendants later married those of Daniel Clark, had him removed from the Secretaryship for "infringement of Royal Prerogative" and he was offered the office of Assistant Secretary, which he proudly declined. He was later reinstated for a season. In 1679 he was made teacher and kept school for eighteen months, receiving forty pounds for this and other work. The house lot which fell to him was a triangular piece on the west side of Farrington River, the "Riverlet" near the Newberry lot and that of Rev. John Wareham. In 1662 Daniel Clark and John Mason had four hundred acres granted them, and in 1665 the former received another grant which was sold to Daniel Gilbert in 1672.

Daniel Clark, Jr., afforded his father considerable trouble and anxiety at times. He was hasty of speech and was fined twenty pounds for making contemptuous remarks about Major Treat, who had him sent to jail. Having confessed his fault and "Manifested some signs of repentance" the Court, earnestly entreated by Major Treat (urged on by Daniel Clark, Senior), ordered the youth released from prison and later remitted the fine in order that he might, as his father expressed it, "pursue his art and trade" and settle among them undiscouraged by fines. In 1704 Daniel, Jr., Locksmith, was fined ten shillings and sent to jail for voting out of his district but was later pardoned.

Daniel Clark's second wife was Martha (Pitkin) Walcott, widow of Simon Walcott, whose six children he took under his roof with their mother in 1689. Governor Roger Walcott in his private journal wrote, "In the year 1689 my mother marryed with Daniel Clark, Esq., and I went with her to live on the West side of the river." Again he said, "In the year 1691 thro' the constant monitions of my father in law and my mother I had many convictions of my sin and danger but after a while they wore off." [!] Finally we have the last brief entry with its simple tribute to the worth of the man, "In the year 1710—the 10th of August dyed my kind father-in-law Daniel Clark, Esq., in the 86th year of his age, with which I was much affected."

Daniel Clark has been called "the great-grandfather of governors." He educated his stepson, Roger Wolcott (who became governor), who married Sarah Drake, Daniel Clark's granddaughter, and had Oliver Wolcott, Governor of Connecticut, whose son, Oliver, was Governor, 1817-27. Roger Wolcott, a descendant, was Governor of Massachusetts and Clark Bissell, another descendant, was Governor of Connecticut, 1847-49. Ursula

Wolcott, a daughter of Roger Wolcott and Sarah Drake, married Mathew Griswold, Governor of Connecticut, and of their descendants it is said no less than twelve became governors.

Daniel Clark's father-in-law was a man of property and influence. He received from the General Court of Dorchester a grant of land, 100 acres, in Neponsett March, 1634, and many grants from the Dorchester Proprietary. He laid out a large farm in Squantum and built a house there. He lived on "The Rock," 1634, where he was freeman and selectman. In 1635 he was appointed to oversee works at the castle; was early engaged in the Connecticut enterprise and sold his property and prepared to remove to Windsor, his death preventing. His widow and children removed to Windsor before 1639. His will, dated Dec. 12, 1635, gave his wife two hundred pounds and the inventory included land in England valued at three hundred pounds.

The Last Will and Testament of Daniel Clark of Windsor hereby nullifying all former Wills

Imps. I commend my soul unto the faithfulnes of the Lord Jesus Christ expectinge his perfecting of sancity in me and my felicitie in the eternall enjoyment of him at his appearance.
